

Summary of Priority Pyramid Results

At the April 25 Open House, attendees were given a description of a variety of priorities that would be considered during the study. The following six priorities were discussed as they related to the study area. Participants were asked to rank their top priorities in order of importance effectively building a pyramid to express the opinion on each theme's importance (three on the base, two in the middle, and the most important on top). The results of this exercise are tallied in the table below, followed by each priority pyramid submitted at the Open House.
